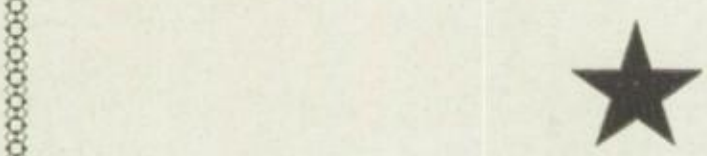
FOREWORD

Another year has passed and we, the Senior Class of Trousdale County High School, present to you, who may find it a pleasure to look over these pages, our best efforts in putting in print the activities of our school during this year in it. We have a certain pride in recording these things and hope that you will share the joy with us that we have found in publishing this book and in our school life, a picture of which in some detail is found here.

It is our hope that those who may come on after us will cherish the traditions of our institution and hold high ideals for it foremost in their minds. May they find the same joy here that we have found. Look benevolently upon our efforts.



DEDICATION

Many have gone from among us to protect our country against the enemy. To those who will never return, we, the Senior Class of Trousdale County High School, dedicate this the nineteenth volume of the Stepping Stone.

CLASS HISTORY

Far away, on a little island, which was once occupied by the Germans, but now is in the hands of the Americans, were two of the Senior boys from T. C. H. S., of the class of 1945. It was a very lonesome place for these two boys, and they saw a little hut in the far distance where they decided they would go. They wanted to visit the family there and find out the kind of life that these folks lived.

As they approached the house, they felt very heartsick, for the family was composed of only the mother and three small children. The father had been killed in battle. They were given a hearty welcome and the three children seemed very happy to see them. The mother told of the hardships that they had suffered trying to save their little home. Then the children begged for a story from the boys. They agreed to tell them one, and the mother requested that they tell about the American system of education.

One of the boys, who was growing fond of the youngest child, took him on his knee and began the story of his four years in high school.

"I will start by going back to the 'good old days,' when a group of sixty-two began making footprints on the clay of the old hilltop at T. C. H. S., in the fall of 1940, as Freshmen. We gathered in the high school gymnasium, wondering who would be our sponsor for the year; as Mr. I. C. Pullias, our principal, announced that the girls would follow Miss Katherine Cox to the Home Economics room and the boys, Miss Laura Owen to her respective room there came some queer looks on some of the pupils' faces, for we all wanted to start our journey together; but with Miss Cox and Miss Owen as our captains, we got off to a good start.

We flew through the storm of Algebra, holding our breaths and trying to obsorb those X's in our brains, but they just seemed "too hard" to soak in well. However, a good many did somehow get through. It also seems as if I can still hear the girls commenting on Miss Cox for making them use a thimble. It seemed as if they were determined not to use one.

We started our activities by a party, which was greatly enjoyed by all, and others events were: The boys' initiation into the Future Farmers organization and the girls' initiation into the Home Economics Club. Some of our boys and girls began to drop out, and as I remember, they were: Evelyn Beal, Paul Watson, Marvin Belcher, Thelma Wright, Bonnie McClanahan, Dorothy McClanahan, Mary D. Fisher, and Sara Lou Eden. Thus ended our first year in high school.

A three-months' pause and we were renamed—Sophomores this time. It gave us a thrill to be called such, after bearing all the burdens and suffering the persecutions played by the role of a Freshman. We were given Miss Margaret Smith, with her sweet smiles as our captain this time; and she was a wonderful leader and instructor. We all hoped that we would pull through our Sophomore year with high marks. This semester we were determined to raise money for the many things that we would need it for later on. So we sponsored a few shows and several other things which put us up in the world all right. We were now becoming well represented in the extra-curricular activities of both football and basketball. It was also during this semester that the Tennesse Maneuvers began. It became very difficult for us to carry on with our school, but with a struggle, we carried on. It was especially hard to keep our girls interested in their work, and it was thought we might lose several of them; but, lucky us—we just lost one, Virginia Key. She married in the Autumn of 1944. We also lost, due to other reasons, several other students this semester. These included: J. W. McCormack, Mary Elice McCormack, Royce Howell, Ben Taylor, Howard Sloan, and Lewis Oldham.

In the fall of 1943, we began our third flight, calling ourselves by the name of Juniors. We knew our tasks would be more difficult, but we had a new captain this year, Miss Troye Moore, and her influence over us makes us proud of our class. Then came the Junior-Senior banquet, perhaps the most important event of the year, and toward which both classes had looked and planned. It was very successfully carried out, and we made quite a gracious host. The gymnasium, which was the scene of the banquet was decorated with red, white, and blue. In the spring of that semester, the little love bug came into our midst and bit Ada McCormack, whom we greatly missed. Others members we lost that year were: Benton Williams, J. C. Linville, Russell Wright, Dresslar Duncan, Rex Ford, and Lounetta Davis. Thus ended the third year of our high school.

During the following three months' vacation, we got our rings and when we did, we knew we were up in the world.

Now we come to the final quarter, the fourth year. Ah! Seniors, we were! And justly proud were we of the name. We had worked and struggled for the past three years of experience. At times, it had seemed almost hopeless, yet through the untiring efforts of our efficient staff of captains, we have been able to make a touchdown against the problems of life.

We had just begun our Senior year, when Thomas Linville was inducted into Uncle Sam's Armed Forces. Mildred Nunley, who had married during our vacation, and also Virginia Key, returned with us to make our final effort, but within a month or two, they left to be with their husbands. This left thirty-three of us to finish our task.

Miss Rachel Dalton, our sweet and patient sponsor, was a great help to us during our Senior year. We appreciated her untiring interest in us and the help she was to us in publishing the 19th Volume of the "Stepping Stone."

Our principal, Mr. I. C. Pullias, worked very hard with us. It was to him we expressed our most sincere thanks for his patience, interest, and his leadership. We will never forget the history classes that he guided us through. How grateful we still are! We are proud of the record behind us and have left it as a model to oncoming Senior Classes, with hopes that they might strive to accomplish as much or even more.

As the boy finished his story, the eldest child looked up at his mother and said, "Mom, I hope some day I can go to a school like that."

—LOUISE HUFFINES.

CLASS PROPHECY

On May 1, 1950, the members of the 1945 Senior Class of Trousdale County High School were entertained at a costume party in the gym. Each person came dressed as if he were about to begin a normal day's work and each was to act as a person of his vocation would.

I was the first to arrive, and as I was to make a report on the costumes that were worn and the actions of each person, I took my place just outside the gym door to watch the parade of my former classmates. I had just taken out my pencil and notebook when I was scared half out of my wits by a terrible scream. I looked up the hall to see a cruel looking woman dressed in white with a knife in each hand. As she approached me, I discovered it to be Dr. Martha Cornwell. The scream had come from that forever ailing Lois McMurray, who had gone to the doctor's office for some kind of a treatment, but apparently the doctor had given the wrong treatment.

Then in walks William Massey and Nat Vance, dressed very much like they always looked at school. "Why, Nat, what is your occupation?" I inquired. "Oh, Greese and me run a one-seated yellow taxi between here and Lafayette, Gallatin, Lebanon, Murfreesboro, Nashville and other places of interest—(of interest—that means plenty of pretty girls.)

About this time, a little boy came tearing down the steps while at the top there stood a most peculiar looking person wearing horn-rimmed glasses with a pencil over one ear and a ruler in her hand, shouting drastic threats at the little creature below. This character turned out to be Mary Frances Brooks; with her was Sarah Haley, who is teaching the local lassies the art of home-making.

I see Lois has recuperated enough to be showing her occupation by demonstrating the advantages of the new kind of false teeth which automatically chew the food without any effort on the part of the owner.

What in the world is everyone laughing at? Why, it's Dorothy Holder, and, look, she's chasing that poor little man around the gym with a rolling pin. I don't know who is he, but I gather it's her husband. I wonder what he has done?

Look at J. B. Gregory! He is certainly realistic about his profession. He is dressed in overalls and has on an old straw hat. He's so proud of that prize pig of his that won first place at the State Fair, that he brought it with him. And there is James Williams, dressed very much like J. B. I understand they own adjoining farms, on which they raise pigs with a musical squeal.

Say, who is that hidden under that huge bonnet, and what is that strange chirping sound I hear? Well, if it isn't Agnes Duncan, with some of her famous vari-colored chickens that she has produced by setting colored Easter eggs.

"Hup, two, three, four! Hup, two, three, four!" Well, if it isn't Mildred Kennedy and Eva Mai Vance. You can tell by their military bearing that they are good army nurses, but maybe they will unbend long enough to join in the fun of the party.

Who's that with that pencil behind her ear and that typewriter slouch? Why, it's none other than Louise Huffines, still the girl Friday for the Vidette, and it looks as if she is trying to mix business with pleasure by interviewing her old classmate and int'mate friend, Maggie Linville, who is the well known coach of the "Leaphigher" basketball team.

I see Lassie Cunningham strolling in wearing a stunning dinner dress. That gold cigarette holder adds just the right touch. She really knows how to upohld the position of a State Representative's daughter.

Marjorie Duncan and Thurman Cothron enter singing "Rifle Toting Papa," the Number One hit of 1950. They are now the star singers on the program, "Guy Guiser's College of Goofy Knowledge."

In walks Carroll Smith, coach of the Arkansas Cotton-Pickers, gloating over his team's latest triumph over the California Lemon-Suckers, which was held in the Pickle Bowl in Sugar City, Iowa.

Mary Cothron, Edna Chamberlain, and Ruth Duncan enter by the front door, scuffling over an Oscar which they have just been awarded for their performances in MGM's "Three Maids and a Mouse." The theme of this picture is after man, came woman and she's been after him ever since. The book from which the picture was made was written by Billy Merryman and cousin Jack Rankin, who also wrote a book entitled, "How to be Popular with the Female Sex," or "Don't Flirt, But be Handy When Someone Else Wishes to."

Enter Prof. Nathaniel Bastian, with a far-away look in his eye. At present, the professor is trying to prove that the world is not round, but triangular in shape.

Close behind Nate is a skinny, poorly dressed man with a hungry look about him. It is Ralph Price. It seems that when the hens went on a sit-down strike in 1946, Ralph bought a huge farm and planted it in egg-plants. Poor Ralph didn't know until it was too late that egg-plants don't produce eggs.

Next comes a well-preserved looking woman, whom I immediately recognized as Doris Oglesby. When I asked her what her occupation is now, she replied, "Why, I use my head, like Mr. Pullias always told us to," and that was all she would tell me, but I found out from other sources that she used her head to instruct her husband how to clean the house after office hours.

Juanita Beal came moping in, talking to herself and looking just as dumb as she did the day she finished high school. For the last six years, she and her parents have been arguing about which college she should attend. She must still be going with that Hagan guy; how else could she learn to argue so?

Just after Juanita's arrival, the party was upset by a terrible crash, and we all rushed outside to find that Billy "Mutt" Gregory had run into the building while trying to show the world that a car can make as much speed as an airplane. Helen Jackson and Voline Pulley were with him, but they all came out unhurt. Helen is married to one of the "Johnny's that came marching home," but Voline decided she'd rather "go with 'em all, but marry none."

Why, who are these two peculiarly-acting creatures dressed in white unforms, conversing in such terms as Phenacetin, Heliotheapy and Naprathay? If it isn't Dr. Morgan and Nurse Carr! Each seems to have a different theory of how a pin-prick should be treated.

The next arrival seems to be gay one, indeed, for she is laughing hilariously, just as she always did at school, and is dressed in a big-flowered dress, with her hair on top of her head and all kinds of jewelry adorning her neck and arms. That's the way all secretaries dress now, but who would ever thought that Sarah Nollner would be seen in a get-up like that?

When Mrs. Whipple arrived, it seemed as if the party was complete. I don't think I need state Virginia's occupation, for I am sure everyone can guess that she is keeping house for Dean.

—ALICE GOTHARD.

CLASS POEM

In the year '33, we first came to this school
With no other thought but to go by the rules;
And though time and again, we have not done our best,
In all things of importance we have stood the test.
The school authorities have always mapped the way,
While our parents and teachers have help us obey.

Our class has stood high in scholastics and play,
Seldom being defeated along the way.
Now the time of our graduation draws so near,
We remember we were guided with a love sincere.
May we ever hold fast to our honor and ideals,
As we go forth to play our part in various fields.

Some of our former classmates are now facing the foe,
On the fields of battle in these times of woe.
They are physically struggling in this awful strife,
For the preservation of true values of life.
Let them inspire us then that we go on to fight,
For things mentally, socially, spiritually right.

—LOIS McMURRY.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

The Senior Class of 1944-45 has at last reached the goal of being allowed to graduate after twelve long years of work.

Without many individual talents and abilities, we feel that progress would have been impossible, therefore, we leave some of these to certain underclassmen. As a result, we hereby publish our Last Will and Testament.

Mr. Pullias already has our love, so we can't leave him that, but we do leave a sincere appreciation for all that he has done for us.

We leave our gratitude to our sponsor, Miss Rachel Dalton, for her untiring efforts to make our class the best class on the hill. She is worthy of all the praise we can give her.

To the entire faculty, we leave our appreciation for anything they may have done for us.

Thurmon Cothron leaves to Fred Carr his ability to be a lamb at school and a lion elsewhere.

Edna Chamberlain bestows her beauty upon Lanwood Brockett.

Nate Bastian bequeaths to Dan Haynie his everlasting love for tall women.

Mary Frances Brooks leaves her admiration for the Navy to Mary Katherine Carey.

Agnes Duncan wills her cherished Senior dignity to the Junior girls.

Ralph Price has written a sensational article on "How to Win Your One and Only," which he bequeaths to his little brother, Billy.

Lassie Cunningham bestows upon Carleen Carman her efficient and business-like manner.

Alice Gothard leaves her love for coaches to Anne Burnley.

Billy Merryman wills to Marvin Bastian his interest in the Sophomore Class.

Travis Morgan leaves to Leon Anthony his place in the Senior room, the fourth period. (We are sure Leon will make the best of it.)

Ruth Duncan bequeaths her own version of the Conga to Sue Stubblefield.

Nat Vance wills his pipe to Clifford Perkins. (We hope Perk will not find this little luxury too expensive.)

Marjorie Duncan leaves Irene Meador.

Billy Gregory bequeaths to Bradley Burton his truck and the art of driving it.

Carroll Smith leaves his numerous parking places to anyone who can do them justice.

Juanita Beal bestows upon Bertie Joy Grgeory her title as F. F. A. Queen.

Dorothy Carr leaves what she calls a giggle to Jimmy Rankin.

Maggie Linville wills her position as guard on the basketball team to her sister, Pauline.

Jack Rankin takes all of his possessions with him, for he thinks he will need them in the future.

William Massey wills his ability to arrive at school late to G. C. Burton.

Sara Nollner leaves to Mattie Belle Duncan her pledge to write to the sailors.

J. B. Gregory bestows upon S. B. Cornwell his love for English.

Lois McMurray leaves to Martha Ann Gammons her ability for the perfect alibis.

Virginia Key Whipple leaves the Senior Class for New York.

Louise Huffines bestows her height upon Nora Lee Wilkerson.

Sarah Haley bequeaths to Julia Herod her ability to handle money.

James Williams bestows upon Doodle Jenkins his red hair and the spirit that goes with it.

Voline Pulley wills her Lebanon interest to Helen Neeley.

Mary Cothron bequeaths to Jean Dalton her place on the annual staff.

Eva Mai Vance bestows upon Katherine Lee the pleasure of talking to a certain glamour boy, in the library.

Martha Cornwell bequeaths to Ann Shoulders her desire to do everything the "Wright" way.

Mildred Kennedy leaves her desire to go to Gallatin to Billie Sue Carver.

Dorothy Holder wills her River Street boy to Mary Ellen Gregory.

Helen Jackson leaves her foreign souvenirs to Dean Roddy.

In witness whereof, I, Doris Oglesby, the Testator, have set my hand and seal hereto, this twenty-second day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and forty-five.

Witnesses: RACHEL DALTON,
ELEANOR STONE.

Testator: DORIS OGLESBY.

Best All Around boy and girl. The big three. We sweep together, dust us three. Most talented and most likely to succeed. Best looking and prettiest. Wittiest boy and girl. All the monkeys aren't in the zoo. Most athletic boy and girl. Tops. Walkie-Talkie. Teacher. The brains. Look, no hands! Up in the air. Wonder what mood Doc's in now? History Class. Most studious. Class honors. Senior Chapel play. Wherefore art thou, Romeo?

GRAMMAR SCHOOL

GRAMMAR SCHOOL

Below the hilltop on the school grounds, Kate Wilson Elementary School is "tops" in our hearts. While we look forward to the time when we will advance to the top of the hill, we must never forget our happy times here. We have learned lessons at Kate Wilson School that will help us go on toward the top. From grade to grade we pass, glad to go, but sorry to leave.
